

Welcome to the AFMCP Forum

This quick reference guide will show you how to navigate the Forum so you can make the most of your learning experience. There are two ways to get to the Forum:

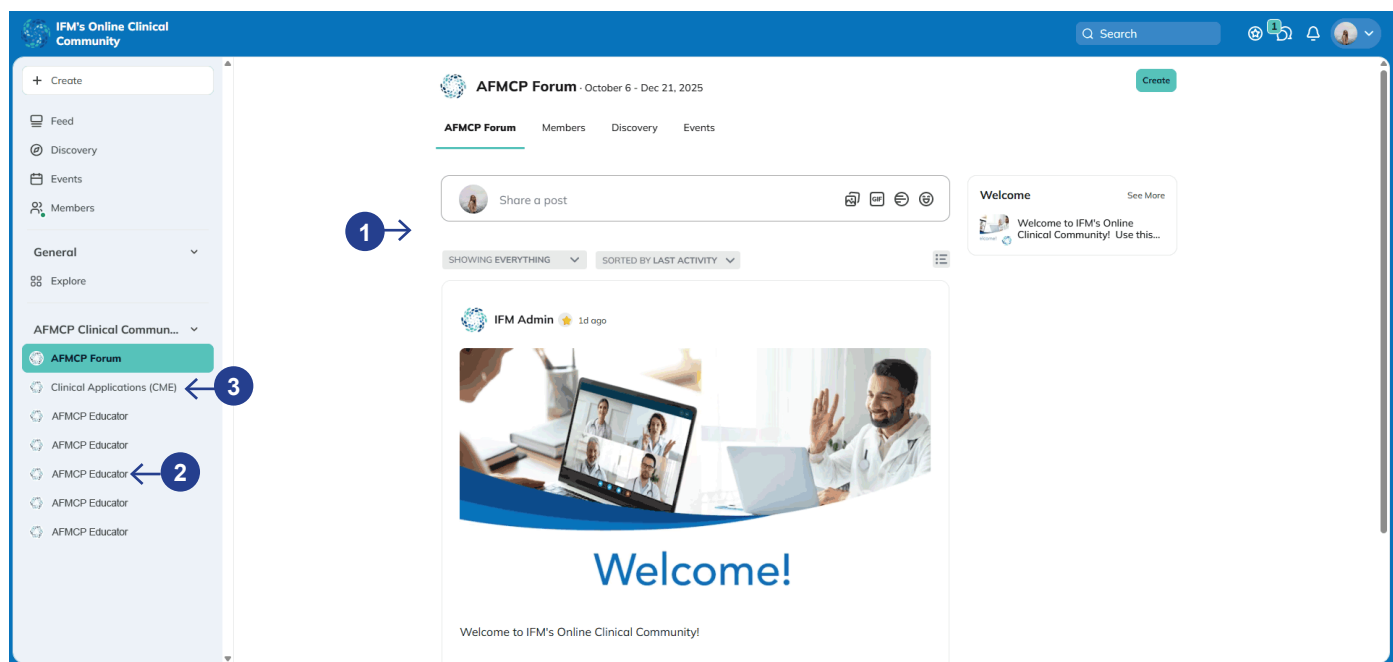

- Access the Forum using the invitation link sent via email. OR
- Access the Forum through the course. (Instructions to access the course)

A Quick Walk-Through Video

Watch this short video to learn how to create or update your profile, share a post, send direct messages, etc. Please note that Educator feeds and Clinical Applications are specific to the AFMCP course and are not addressed in this video.

Forum Structure

Discussions will take place on three main areas of the Forum: Main Feed (1), Educator Feed (2), and Clinical Applications (3) (CME).

1 Main Feed: This area is used for important course announcements, reminders, and updates. To create a post, start typing in the open text box above the feed. You can add images and emoji reactions to personalize your messages.

2 Educator Feeds: Course educators will provide live moderation during select weeks of the program. Toward the bottom left of your screen, you will see dedicated feeds with each educator's name. To open a feed, click on their name. Educators will only provide moderation during the dates listed on their feed.

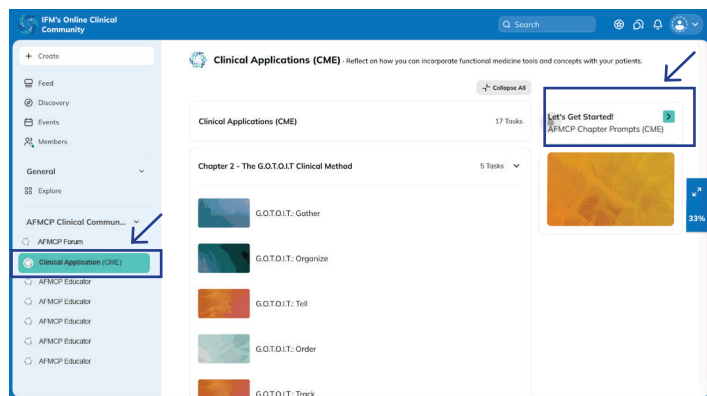

3 Clinical Applications*: Clinical Application tasks are designed to strengthen your use of functional medicine tools in practice and reflect on your experiences. At the end of each chapter, you will be prompted to engage with the chapter-related tasks.

Instructions on navigating the Clinical Applications area are available on the next page.

 Please Note: All AFMCP learners are encouraged to participate and apply their new skills. Participation in Clinical Applications is only eligible for CME credit for those who have purchased the CME add-on during registration.*

Clinical Application Task Navigation

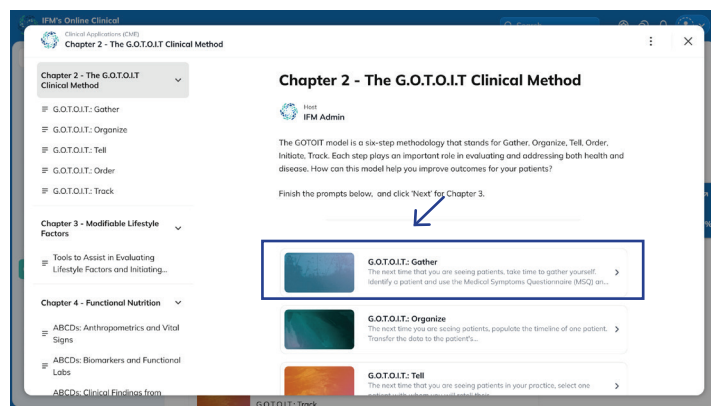

1. First select Clinical Applications (CME) from the left menu. When you see the new screen, click the top right box to access the task prompts.

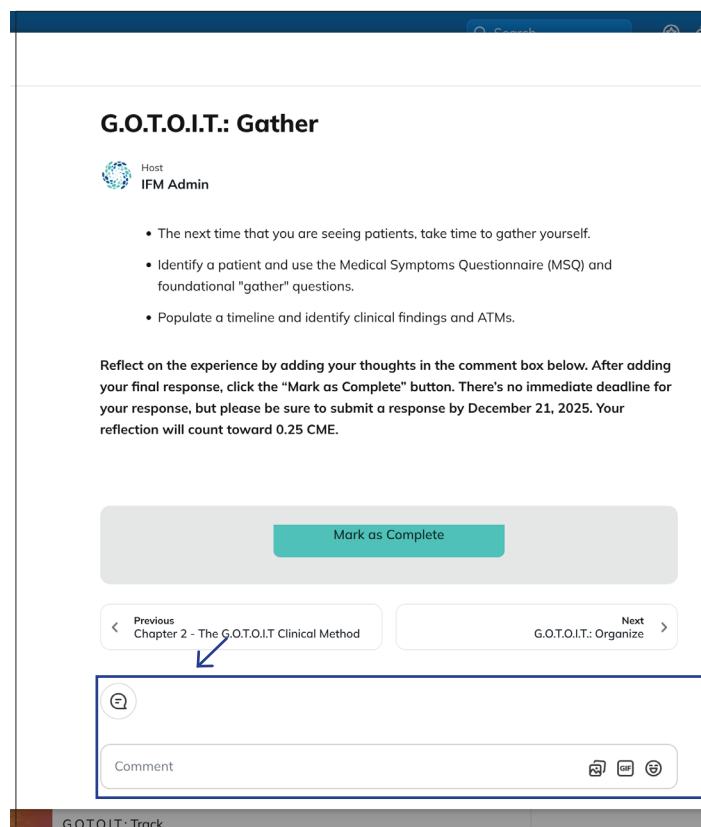

2. Select the chapter you have just completed.

3. Select the task within the chapter.

4. Once you have worked through the task, mark as complete and share your reflections with the other members of the Forum in the comment section.

Welcome to the AFMCP course. We can't wait to meet you in the Forum for clinical discussions, educator Q&As, and reflections on what you have learned!
